Its Boundless Riches and Great Opportunities.

To the Editors of the Boston Advertiser: After twenty years of active business life in Boston, other interests in 1871 called me to Nebraska; and as from year to year I return here to see what is left of the old and so much that is new, the desire is strengthened that East and West might each be better informed concerning the other than they really are. That much is written, gubilshed and read, we all know, and the West is comparatively well informed concerning the East; but no Eastern man can know, much less comprehend, what the West is until he sees it. Then, indeed, he may begin to have some realizing sense of how large a world we live in, and the wealth of opportunity which there is to give force to the oft-repeated injunction-"Go West."

The East is rich in acquired capital; the West in a wealth of natural resources which no tongue can tell or pen describe; and, rapidly as it may seem to some that these are being developed and improved, it is evident to improvement; and I venture the suggestion that many who are wont to our charming watering-places or mountain retreats, would do well to devote a part of the time, at least, to rivers. It would have the charm of novelty; the objects of interest are abundant and various, and, whether he would or not, one eye at least would inevitably be attracted to opportunities for profitable business operations.

The great wealth of the prairie regions is the soil, which, at the minimum of cost, yields immense crops for markets direct or for the feeding of stock which-in the shape of beef, markets-brings full value in cash. Fruits and vegetables are abundant and of luxuriant growth. Beyond is the mining region, an immense area of mineral wealth, but unproductive Northern Spy, Early Harvest, Bai- to the creek. of food, affording already a Western market for the food crops of the agricultural and mining regions, and which, at no distant day, is to compete with the East for a portion of known at the East, and with which she sustains much more intimate business relations than with the intervening region to which allusion is made. My Dear Sir :-In compliance with a promise made you, I write hastily and briefly, in relation particularly to fruit growing in Nebraska. I have been in the State now over twenty-one years. During that time I have felt great interest in agriculture and horticulture. Fruit growing and experiments have been among my "hobbies"-we all have "hobbies of some kind, I take it. HARPER'S BAZAR. ILLUSTRATED.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS. The Buzur is the organ of the fashionable world, and the expounder of that world's laws; and it is The Buzar commends itself to every member of household-to the children by droll and pretty ures, to the young ladies by its fashion plates endiess variety, to the provident matron by it atterns for the children's clothes, to p its tasteful designs for embroidered s by as disserin designs for embrondered slippers and luxurious dressing gowns. But the reading-matter of the Bazar is uniformly of great excellence. The paper has acquired a wide popularity for the fire-side enjoyment it affords, and has become an established authority with the ladies of America.—N. F. Exercise Post.
